RIVERSVALE,

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.

14. II. 04.

Dear Friend,

Your kind letter touched me greatly. These translations from Heine were made for amusement. It would have been no surprise to my wife to learn that you are a lover of Heine: she could recognise that from your letters to me which ever gave to us equal delight.

I am so glad that Thompson has met ^{and Frankman} you again with Gardiner & Breasted. I did not hear who the others were at dinner.

I do hope you will come here one day. I am now ~~all~~ alone with Mr. Bradbury, which is an excellent arrangement for getting through work.
Occasionally a friend from Manchester or Oxford or London visits us. My sister who is becoming quite an Egyptologist, is now on the Nile where the excavators are most kind in inviting her to see their work. She will be back again in a few weeks and time to go with me to Oxford.

Please remember me very kindly to Fran Egan.

Yours very truly

F. L. Griffith.
