It is a real pleasure to receive your handwriting again and to read your latest contributions to science which have the surety and freedom of 1882! Many thanks for the pamphlets and for the reference to the statue of "Hampden". He must have had a fine taste in sculpture. What was his nausee like!

In the last few days I have been reading Bohémie with a pupil, so that I was ready to appreciate your most interesting and important 'Unterschied' which I had not seen before. Scientific publications will for the most part have to wait for better times, here at any rate; I am cataloguing the Nubian finds (Nubata) of 1912-13, but the publication will have to be brief. I hope the preparation of the Dictionary is going forward again; perhaps when the MS is funded it will be possible to publish.
