Helwan.

My dear Prof. Erman,

Thank you heartily for your paper on the Egyptian verb which I was most glad to receive.
I had already read it once - for the copy you sent to Reisner came some first and I thought Reisner could very well wait two days, so I kept it so long & read it. It's just the very thing I wished to see: after I have read it once or twice more I may be emboldened to attack the weighty Sethe at whose volume I have as of the meeting said that those were all silly tales. How great & good a thing it is to be highly educated! So much for Peter.

Love, dear Prof. Esmann,

Yours most sincerely

W. P. Schell

The hair from behind the head he makes into charms. They are particularly useful for women: the eye-test are also highly esteemed. The head will also sell at a good price: it is ^{ground} ~~put~~ below the threshold to bring prosperity to the house. The Arab eats most of the hyaena meat - but the heart + liver he sells to such people as feel they are of a timid disposition and need more courage. This was all told me by the chief of police at the Tig but the manner of the murder yet looked askance.

I hope all goes well with you and Mat Peter and his little brother do not quarrel.

Our house alas! is in some trouble. my sister is rather ill - mending however now, el hamdu lillahi.
Here is a tale for Peter. - quite true.

There is a man, an Arab, near El Bershek, who has no land or cattle: he is a hunter + catches gazelles and kills hyaenas. The gazelles he sells at $\frac{1}{2}$ guinea to 1 guinea each.
The hyaenas, of which he already has killed 33, he eats!
